Bereavement Grief

(Understanding the seven tasks of mourning)

Everyone grieves; not everyone mourns. This segment explores the seven tasks of mourning: turning grief "inside out." It addresses what the grief journey might look like if the griever were empowered to take hold of his/her experience.

- » The seven tasks of mourning
- » Coping Skills
- » "Will I pass through certain predictable stages?"
- » "No one will listen to me!"
- » "Am I going crazy?"
- » Anaesthetizing our pain: short term relief vs. long term healing

Bereavement Grief

(Companioning the bereaved and understanding presence)

This workshop addresses the issue of companioning a bereaved person, what it means to be fully present without being pulled into despair.

- » Intuitive versus demonstrative emotional style--how our emotional style affects how we grieve
- » Listening Skills
- » What companioning is and is not
- » The dark journey of the soul
- » The tenets of companioning
- » Disenfranchised Grief
- » Empowering the griever: the myths about stages

What they're saying:

Feedback from attendees

"I first heard Clair at an Advocis conference and came away so moved that I asked him to be a keynote speaker at our annual Insurance and Estate Planning Conference for top financial advisors. His message was inspiring and well received by all who attended. His delivery was powerful and insightful. He connects with his audience and displays a genuine caring for people."
 --Insurance Manager, Investors Group

"As a healthcare worker I often felt inadequate when dealing with patients who were experiencing a grief reaction. This workshop has provided me with a proper understanding of grief and mourning and given me the skills to assist people in a productive manner."
 --RN, Canadian Cancer Society

"I found Clair's manner and presentation profoundly moving. I'm glad I heard him speak."
 --Massage Therapist
